The indications for twenty-four hours, commencing at 3 p. m. to-day, for Missouri are: Fair weather, followed by local rains in the northern portion; colder, except in the southeast portion slightly warmer; light to fresh southerly winds, becoming variable.

GAIL HAMILTON's political ambition has been sprinkled with cold water.

It seems to be a bad year for tattooed aspirants and ballot-box stuffers. This sort of thing ought to be kept up.

It is an open question whether "SUNDAY" and the "Shenandoah" would do any better than "Hancock and Gettysburg" in trying to reach the White House.

"If you want me to take the nomination, you've got to force it on me; but 'please don't forget to force it, when the time comes.'"
J. G. B.

Mr. BLAINE thinks that the American people should adopt a policy that will give "comfort and culture to every home." This is a strong reason why the war tariff policy should go.

Mr. C. P. HUNTINGTON says that he would not accept the provisions of the Outwattle bill even if the bill passes. Perhaps he could be induced to accept the provisions of a true bill found by some enterprising Grand-Jury.

The czar wants to levy on some of the Sultan's property in order to collect that unpaid war indemnity. This is the reason why he is massing so many troops on the frontier. If His Majesty needs any help we would advise him to secure the services of a few St. Louis constables.

The crow-eating organs should not prematurely break forth into double-edged joy over Mr. BLAINE's strategic letter. There is no sound reason why the letter should not be accepted as a cunning plea for renomination by acclamation, and those who read it between the lines will detect something of the kind.

The most idyllic and guileless statement made by Mr. HUNTINGTON is the announcement that he "lost sight of money-making" in a patriotic desire to do his part in finishing our great national thoroughfare. Assuming this to be true, Mr. HUNTINGTON's luck becomes so sublime that people ought to take off their hats to it.

There are several prominent Republicans of whom could poll a much larger vote throughout the whole country than Mr. BLAINE, but he could doubtless poll a larger vote in New York State than any Republican with any chance of a nomination. Hence, if Mr. BLAINE's letter means that he is really out of the race, it should strengthen the hope of Democratic success.

The persistent hammering which the Post-Dispatch has given to Missouri railroad assessments for years past has not been vain. Even the St. Louis Republic has at last come out flat-footed against the unjustly low assessment of railroad property as compared with that of farmers and other taxpayers. Perhaps this is a sign that some of the candidates for State office will make the incumbents ex-officio members of the State Board of Equalization are feeling their way to come out boldly and admit, as the Republic does, that railroads should be assessed at least as high in proportion to value as the farms are, and with no more deduction for debts and mortgages. Will any Democratic candidate dare to admit that his party has been compelling the people of the State to pay about $2,000,000 of taxes annually which should have been collected from the railroads?

THE BLAINE MANIFESTO.

No other pen than Mr. BLAINE's could have written such an adroit and effective plea for his renomination as we find in his letter announcing that his name shall not, with his consent, be submitted to the Republican Convention. Since HORATIO SEYMOUR, "towing he would never consent, consented," nobody needs to be told what such withdrawals generally mean, or that nominations are not limited to names submitted by consent. Accordingly Mr. BLAINE appends to his alleged withdrawal a statement going to show that he was nominated to lead a forlorn hope in 1884, when his party was in a minority of 100 electoral votes on the basis of preceding elections, and that his leadership and personal magnetism put so much new life and energy into it that it was beaten only by a scratch, and is now strong enough to elect anybody who represents Mr. BLAINE's views and can pull the Blaine strength. The obvious inference is that it would be ungrateful to let anybody else harvest the fruits of Mr. BLAINE's labors, and rather hazardous to let anybody else direct the nominations and shape the issues of the campaign.

STILL IN THE LEAD.

If there was ever any question in the mind of any one as to our intention of making the SUNDAY POST-DISPATCH the first and best of the Sunday morning papers of St. Louis, that question has been effectually disposed of by the evidence of accomplished facts. The Sunday Globe-Democrat is an admirable paper, conducted with intelligence and enterprise, backed with ample capital and resources, and has prided itself on the thoroughness with which it has covered the field of news. Yet a comparison of the two issues of yesterday shows that while the telegraphic service of the Globe-Democrat covered 71 points, from which it published 144 telegrams, the telegraphic service of the SUNDAY POST-DISPATCH furnished its readers with 203 telegrams from no less than 102 different points.

A TALE OF TWO CITIES.

The weekly clearing-house exhibit of last week emphasizes the contrast between the healthy prosperity of St. Louis and the flabby collapse of the Kansas City boom. The showing for last week as compared with the corresponding week of last year is:

St. Louis: clearings, $18,825,123; increase, 13.3 per cent.

Kansas City: clearings, $5,617,932; decrease, 5.9 per cent.

Such figures speak for themselves.

Words of Fraise.

From the Sedalia Journal.
Die St. Louis Post-Dispatch ist sicherlich eines der besten Ableister englischer Sprache in den Vereinigten Staaten. Der Telegraphendienst ist so ausgedehnt, wie der fremde eines Morgenblattes. Die Local-Neigkeiten werden in gedrängter und leicht lesbare stichhaltiger Form den auswertigen Lesern um mehrere Stunden früher zu Gesicht gebracht als durch die nebrigen St. Louiser Blätter. Was aber der Post-Dispatch besonders wertvoll macht, ist deren unerschrockene Besprechung der öffentlichen und politischen Angelegenheiten, ohne Rücksicht auf Parteien oder Personen. Nicht unerwähnt wollen wir die gediegene Gebilde unferne Sonntags-Nummer lassen. Wer eine zuverlässige englische Zeitung halten will, der wende sich an die Herausgeber der St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS.

A SUBSCRIBER.—A half dollar of 1883 is not at premium.

J. G. H. M.—The Gasconade bridge disaster is due to the negligence of the contractor.

T. V. V. St. Charles, Mo.—Ex-Judge G. S. Van Wagoner is a Democrat.

SUBSCRIBER.—We do not publish the address of coin dealers outside of the advertising columns.

JOS. HERR.—A half dollar of 1883 with rare is valued at 75 cents, without them no premium.

SUBSCRIBER.—The half dollar of 1881, of which you enclose a rubbing, is not at a premium.

JACK.—It is optional with you, whether you should let the lady know who sends her the valentine.

SUBSCRIBER.—We do not print the addresses of medical specialists outside of the advertising columns.

READER.—It would be impossible to give more than a conjecture as to the four richest men in the world.

TWO CRANKS.—A marriage of parties who agree to adopt an assumed name would be held valid by the courts.

SEVERAL SUBSCRIBERS.—The Know-Nothing riots, properly so called, began on August 7, 1854, and lasted several days.

ADVICE.—The Post-Dispatch.—The time for the next Civil-Service examination has not been set. Write to the Postmaster for fuller information.

TWO CRANKS.—The heroine in the play of "Never Say Die" is not thrown into the tank of water, but a man who is disguised to resemble her gets the ducking.

A READER.—A dime of 1841 is worth 30 cents; of 1851, no premium. A quarter of 1851 is worth 40 to 50 cents; a quarter of 1857, same. A half-dollar of 1853 is not at a premium.

H. M. LITTLE, Texarkana, Tex.—There were four Confederate half dollars coined in 1861, and they are held by dealers at $80. The ordinary United States half dollar of 1861 is not at a premium.

W. T. H.—If A, B, C and D are playing euchre, A and C partners against B and D, and if A deals and B orders turn up, A can play alone. If you can play the game where you can take "your partner's best," D can take that card, also.

SUBSCRIBER.—The fastest passage across the Atlantic was that of the Umbria, a Cunarder, September 8 to 9, 1877, from New York to Queenstown, in 10 days 4 hours 25 minutes. 3. There is no record of the time of the fastest passage across the Atlantic.

J. B. F.—The lawyers you mention must publish the place to which they have removed their offices. We cannot give you the names of the lawyers who have moved here. A postage stamp placed on the usual corner of an envelope, but turned upside down, means "write no more."

Adjusted Insane.
